The Cincinnati distilleries expect to shut down the last of June under the agreement made by the pool.

There actually seems ground for suspicion that President Arthur went fishing to escape the importunities of Mahone.

The opinion is expressed in Pennsylvania that the Cameron influence will be exerted to send a Blaine delegation to the National Convention.

A London physician thinks the English sparrow is subject to small-pox and is an agent for the spread of the disease. He advises its extermination.

The Ohio Senate voted to lay the Cochran Tobacco Inspection Bill on the table but as a motion to reconsider was adopted it may be called up at any time.

JEFFERSON wrote that "great cities are pestilential to the morals, health and liberty of man," and to-day everybody is swarming in great cities; not encouraging for the future.

The Lancet thinks that if children would wear woollen next the skin, and wear longer clothing, suspending it from the shoulders, we would hear more of boisterous health and less of back aches and pains.

The defendants in the Star Route case are very confident that the jury will disagree, and in that event have expressed their determination to sue for damages all the newspapers that have urged their prosecution.

The enterprise of the Madison Square Theatre is sending their attractions to every city, town, and village in the land. They not only furnish good companies, but equip each one with special scenery sufficient to present their plays in proper manner.

The whole of Germany has for some time been excited and nervous over the report that Prince Bismarck is afflicted with an enormous appetite. It was consequently feared that some day in a fit of extreme hunger that he would overload his stomach and die. His physicians positively contradict the report and state that his whole trouble is lack of appetite and Germany is now thrown into convulsions by fear that her great, great statesman may starve to death.

The Philadelphia Press says: The wheat crop of the current year is so large in this country and, the world over, comes so near being larger than the demand, that nearly everyone directly interested in wheat will make more money in the next six months if the wheat crop in the United States just showing above the ground is a failure. The temptation to circulate reports of a short crop under these circumstances is very great and they are certain to abound until the year's wheat is out of danger.

NOTHING BUT WIND,

But There is Enough of That to Satisfy the Oldest Inhabitant.

NEBRASKA CITY, NEB., April 16.—Saturday a fearful wind storm passed through the southern portion of the county, doing damage that will figure up into the thousands. Barns and fences were blown down, houses unroofed, and live stock killed and injured. The house of James Warrell was completely demolished, and the family bruised. Mr. Morrell is internally injured, and his recovery is doubtful. Miss Alice Smock, a visitor, had an arm broken. At Auburn the damage was large. The grain elevator was blown down, and kindling wood made out of the Burlington & Missouri windmill. The lumber yard lost considerable lumber, as the wind carried the boards a long distance. For a mile along the railroad the telegraph poles were pulled out of the ground. A number of stores had windows blown out and roofs raised.

Trying to Track "Number One."
LONDON, April 16.—Several detectives have gone to the United States for the purpose of tracking Tynan, the "Number One," identified by Carey at Joe Brady's trial, from a photograph. "Dr." Gallagher, it is reported, has turned informer.

The Milwaukee Arson Trial.
MILWAUKEE, April 16.—The Scheller arson trial will probably be concluded on Tuesday next. There are still about a dozen witnesses to be examined. George Scheller, the prisoner, was on the witness stand Saturday all day in his own behalf.

Terrorized and Robbed.
QUINCY, ILL., April 16.—About 11 o'clock at night, while Mrs. Wright, wife of M. W. Wright, was sitting at home alone, a man entered the house, placed a revolver to her head, told her if she made a noise he would shoot her, and then demanded her money. She gave him the keys to the drawer. The robber secured $180 cash, but left valuable papers.

The Butcher.
TEXAS SITTINGS.

A butcher is a man who wears an apron like that of a barkeeper. When you ask him for a porter-house steak he produces a bone that looks as if it belonged to a mastodon, with a little meat hanging to it. He hooks this bone on to his badly adjusted scales, swings himself on it, and yells "five pounds!" You pay for five pounds of meat, but you only carry off three pounds of bone and six ounces of meat. And the worst of it is, you do not get that, for he proceeds to chop off the bone, which he keeps and afterwards sells it to a hotel to make soup out of. That's the kind of a philanthropist some butchers are.

There are others who are not quite so enthusiastic. They do not swing themselves clear off the floor when they weigh meat. They only keep a hand as big as a canvas-covered ham on the meat to prevent it from blowing of the scales. In law and equity, you are entitled to the butcher's hand along with the meat, for you have bought it and paid for it, but he never delivers the goods. He needs that hand in his business. It is so handy in weighing. He sells that hand eight for ten cents a pound forty times a day, he always keeps it on hand, as it were, it being so useful in making change, and in removing a customer who wants to have the meat weighed over.

The butcher can be very sarcastic if he tries. Probably his trade has something to do with his making cutting remarks. Besides, he is a man of brains, having more on hand than he has any use for, which may account for the fact that he is never sent Congress or to the Legislature.

We once suggested to a butcher that he put his scales where the customers could see the dial, not necessarily for publication, but merely as a pledge of good faith. "O, yes," he replied scornfully, I suppose after a while when you buy a five-cent soup bone, you will expect me to put on my swallow-tail Sunday coat and my stove-pipe hat, hire the finest hack in town and a brass band, go in procession to your shanty and deliver the soup bone." We assured him he was mistaken, that no such idea had ever entered our head, but we never after enriched him with any suggestions how to acquire the esteem and respect of his fellow citizens. We may mention right here, incidentally, in closing these remarks, that they do not apply to all butchers, but principally to the one who did not seem to need any advice where to hang his scales.

An interesting story comes from Louisville about a pair of Texas ponies which were inseparable in life and in death not long divided. They spent the winter in a Kentucky pasture, where they frolicked together like kittens from morning till night, to the delight of all the children in the neighborhood. Nobody thought of using one of them without letting the other follow after for its own amusement. A fortnight ago, one of them was taken sick and soon died, and thereafter the other acted as if it were crazy, which indeed it probably was. From a playful and docile creature it became a veritable demon kicking its stable to pieces, lashing out in a perfect frenzy at anyone who attempted to approach it, and finally died, not of a broken heart but a broken neck, the result of a fall.

Lookout for an announcement by J. W. Sparks & Bro., in Thursday's issue of the DAILY BULLETIN. It will be of especial interest to the public.

The birth of an eccentric child in Turkish Kurdistan is announced by the Diarbekir newspaper. The infant, who is an object of interest not unmingled with alarm to all the neighborhood, was born with a beard and moustache, a perfect set of thirty-two teeth, and with no fewer than forty distinct formed fingers. Its behavior from the moment of its birth has been far from satisfactory. It is excessively noisy and violent, and, owing to the cruel bites it inflicts on all who come within reach of its mouth, it has been found necessary to extract all of its front teeth.
